Maisha hapo corporate world inatawanga watu vibaya sana. Ni ile mtu hasemi. Sasa mtu anaeearn 200k atakuja aje kukuambia vile maisha inatwanga yeye. Mara toxic working environment, mara strained marriage lakini utahave kukaa hapo, anga child upkeep ulipata na baby mama ile time ulijoin kazi ukaongezea bibi kama mwanaume kamili■■■mara promotions zinaenda kwa ass lickers, anga huwezisema ukweli. Mara the HoD hakupendi sijui wewe ni mlevi na senior manager hapendi walevi■■■Si rahisi. But you see with all this burden on your shoulders, umeshindwa kujitoa. 1. Family first, watoto ni wako na wanaishi, bills utalipa zote 2. Watoto wanasoma Adamson schools so fee lazima every month 3. Baby mama anataka upkeep ya 25k kila mwezi na sahii ako courting another increments 4. Boss is always on your kneck akikutafura maneno. Anga you are not obedient mara ooh. Hataki kuelewa kuwa si kila mtu atampenda. 5. Juu wewe unaeearn hiyo do, society inaexpect udrive Mercedes benz , anga ununue plot kahawa Sukari B ama Varsity Ville. 6. Sijui sahii uko 35 sijui 43■■. Ushagive up. Ata ushakufa sasa nikutembea tu unatembea■ Sasa utado? I have already warmed you not to resign your job. "Mnataka tufanyaje maumbwa nyinyi?■■■. Not all of us can do business. " That's true. I agree totally, not everyone can fo business. Wewe tulia hapo juu out here in business, you will not survive if you think you are not cut for businesses. However, in most of these corporate jobs, you will realize that there are still entrepreneurs in it and still doubt themselves or keep postponing from working on the alternatives that can ease their burdens. I know it is very hard to juggle a job and a side hustle (ofcourse you guys choose hustles-wars that you will definitely lose) instead of going for exactly what you are good at. You work at Google, Safaricom, Microsoft, AWS, some good companies that are tech-savvy but you don't appreciate those many hours of waiting for a ticket to resolve or a feature to git merge. You are a teacher, in four lessons in a day, some bouncing with a laptop and all you do is post on Facebook, hello, huku ni side hustles gani nyinyi hufanya? This is not a lecture but to tell you that, you can find what aligns with what you do. I will be doing a Q&A; membership and I am looking for founding members who are ready we grow together. By the end of the day, lazima kila mtu ajaribu kitu inamvaa, pesa hiyo kidogo yenye iko, tutaijaribisha kakitu See link in the comments

Here's your draft, cleaned up for clarity and flow, but still keeping the raw, conversational, real tone you like. I didn't polish it too much — it still feels like you speaking directly to your people: --- Lakini hii Africa kuna watu wamejaribu sana kuipigania kimaendeleo bila hata kushiriki siasa. We don't need politicians as such. Of course, some have indirectly ripped from political deals, but majority of them have done fairly good. You see that Tony Elumelu, Fred Swaniker, Strive Masiyiwa, and even James Mwangi — these guys deserve a clap. Najua mnaezajam story na Equity, but acha tu niongelelee Fred na Tony. If you're hearing about Fred Swaniker for the first time, Fred founded the African Leadership Group — made up of ALU, ALX Program, ALX Ventures, and several other branches under the same vision. Fred has trained over 20,000 Africans since 2022 in high-demand skills — from Software Engineering to Freelancing. What Fred did right is this: he simply recognized that Africans are smart, and we can join this tech journey. He started training youth to contribute globally, from their own comfort. Kuna wasee sai wanaishi na freelancing — wamejifunza skills, wanado hustle yao online. Hapo gava haiko. Utaskia tu: "Ajira kwa vijana... 7 Billion blah blah" ■■■ Fred has been doing this with support from Mastercard — and he's really done a wonderful job in Africa. Now Tony — bro, a bank literally runs Tony Elumelu Foundation. Every year, he picks about 1,000 African entrepreneurs, trains them on business and innovation. If you come out with a viable idea, anakudunga 500K — unaanzisha biz. Imagine if more Africans did that? Si tutaendelea saaana? We can develop this continent if we just decide. Still, there are expatriates who've come in and genuinely helped — like MEST Africa, Jasiri, Antler, and more. But be keen, some are not straight. Just visit some of this websites I have mentioned, you may find what you have been unsuccesfully looking for or discover something that can help you or a friend. My posts are not endorsed, they are just natural mentions. I am a a MESTer and I'd love more youth entrepreneurs to get this 21st century entrepreneurship skills. ---
